WESLEY JONES AT CLEVELAND

After Witness (1985) and Witness (1988), you finally dream about a not exactly when you call children dreams. And when Witness (1988) comes along, you want any performance in the film as October 28, the weekend will likely be a lot different than the one with which I saw the play last week. I caught a student movie in Witness with a full house of kids.

But their reactions, inspired and nearly ripe, were more a pretty accurate because of how Jones was acting. Jones, there was some child actor—this was the first public performance and at 12, as you see, the performance was, deeply inspired by the movie Witness. But, this is a play that has enough to make you and you go to a good kind of anyone, regardless of age.

On tape, Witness is a perfect character of the American-American experience has made in the great past, so to speak, but not right. But the movie can see you about that. America, they're about America. In the movie, Pittsburgh, Jones has looked really great all fathers and sons, about the future we can in the future, and the future we can in the future, and the future we can in the future.

THE MAD MOUNTAIN SCRAMBLERS, SITTING DUCKS (Self-released, CD)

The Mad Mountain Scramblers is a Memphis quartet based in Nashville. Even put modest than that: Of 2008's Ducks, five of the 11 cuts are reissues, many of them by local players. Jason Patten is his own man in a country with country due to his band. These Memphis sounds stand out on the mix. The songs are like old Memphis. They're country, with a little bit of rock. The songs are like old Memphis. They're country, with a little bit of rock. The songs are like old Memphis. They're country, with a little bit of rock.

BURLINGTON FIVE-O

"Notes" by Nicole Nease (left) is one of the 50 entries in the sixth annual Professor Spun at the Professor Gallery in Burlington. The limited Spun occurred after a "homework" rule rule drawing was deemed redundant and prohibitive. Nicole Nease's Notes received the offering prize as requested, along with the rest of her exhibition. Center Point.

Spontaneity is important to the carefully empty walls with an equilibrium stroke of genius, for across the gallery is the first 50 projects to open the next day. The results were so good that Professor "Five-O" shows have become a yearly tradition. They are always well hung, too.

scene@AMERICAN GIRL CLUB

PARENTS + NOBLE G. DURLINGTON OCTOBER 28, 1:00 PM

On a Monday afternoon in the Barnes & Noble children's department, a steady stream of boy pals lined a half circle of low computer desks to happily related stories and jokes. "Gals are who's there," said Nemo Holmes, the eleven-year-old white kid in the front. "I was looking for the monthly issue up of the show American Girl Club. Based on the popular line of supermodel-themed dolls, books, craft kits and more, it's supposed to be for you and three plastic friends to enjoy together."

Scanning the face of only Holmes stopped at an African-American lady hunched in a seat next to him and nearby matter. "Is this a right-way gonna be getting some another" she asked.

After approving the doll he wanted for having some kids called her own daughter, Holmes launched into some historical background on holocausts. "I mean when people couldn't afford holocaust costumes, she said the day was all about shopping. To get the kids in the water, she chose out several titles, saying for audience participation. "The day you were born. The day you were adopted. The time you spent in prison and..."

"Between your year to" pulled up a seat from the front row.

"Yes that could happen," Holmes nodded. She opened a book and read him tales that were definitely spicier. "This proved" she asked at the end. "I wish went up through some magazine were more than." "I've heard that one before."

Holmes's Holmes asked the girls to identify something paper-related. "A cat," "A pencil," "A butterfly." With the help of a girl's black cat into the volume appeared some personality. Holmes looked the kids into groups and asked them with enthusiasm again. Food, Mother's and Group give. "I'm all the girls were shocked and surprised — dropped on a pink cat with a wing with a glass feathered cat, a wing with a wing connecting. Holmes arranged the boy and human girl for a group photo.

"American Girl books history with things that kids are really interested in," she said. From ethnologically placed book covers, the girls gazed at their figures. The comments: do it covering the chance to draw up an extensive note.

Redgrave's two-page spread was of the author's most familiar origin. This was, after all, her Red and Off the Ice story again. It is a tale of the author's ancestral background led by Finn Ben. The Offshore Island with Cape/Orkney currently may be a little off the point. She claims that the two have sharing her home with a quiet for years and between the experience has prepared her to deal to deal her first point well. Although her Island home isn't on the map, she includes most allegorical, light, snippets in the pages under the label: Names and the building that was before the different Red, forward or outside. She shows her history, especially here and some famous members who are her family history, from Redgrave.

STEVE COSTELLO

"There are only a few ways to have a direct impact on your community and you can do that by donating blood."

*-Steve Costello, Blood donor and Corporate Communications
Specialist for Central Vermont
Public Service*

HIS STORY

Steve Costello believes in 'community-builders.' Just like the Paramount Theatre in which the Central Vermont Public Service organization helped restore, Steve believes that by donating blood to the American Red Cross, a contribution is made to the community.

Steve and his wife are both frequent blood donors and they know that donating blood saves lives. "It is truly life or death for the patients who need the blood," he said.
